STARTER EDUCATIONAL SCHOLARSHIP

Sponsored by JANE E. RYAN

About the sponsor: Jane Ryan is an educator who has helped scores of young people prepare for successful, elevated lives for five decades. As a counselor, author and filmmaker she has used a variety of ways to help individuals approach and attain their educational and life goals.

During her early life in the late 1940's and early '50's Jane watched her beloved grandfather farm gnarly fields and plant his crops behind stubborn mules who pulled a worn plow. Then at 8 years old she moved from Nebraska to rural North Carolina with her family while her father served his tour as a Coast Guard pilot.

In her new home, and because of those early experiences, Ryan was drawn to the farmers who lived nearby and the fact that many were Black – people who were totally new to her – made her new friends even more interesting. She recalls that one particular family let her hang out with them and answer Jane's million questions while she learned to bottle feed a motherless goat. Even more important, she learned firsthand that picking cotton is very painful to the hands and backs of those picking.

To this day Jane is filled with warm memories for those families who lovingly demonstrated gentle, accepting concern for her. She also believes that any positive, caring personality traits she possesses were instilled in her in the “old days” by those African American adults who were so kind to that young girl from Nebraska.

It is with a heart filled with gratitude for those experiences in rural North Carolina that Jane Ryan offers three (3) scholarships to African American students who dream of earning an education that will lead to successful careers. She calls the scholarships “Starters” because they are meant to provide that necessary first step into educational programs for qualified high school graduates whose situation may otherwise keep them from taking that first move toward their waiting adventure.

Jane often says to young people, “Dream BIG! What's the point of dreaming small? And then just follow directions!”

So, Interested Students, you are invited to apply!

Wishing you the best. Jane Ryan
